

“I just knew the answer”: Decreasing Calling Out Among Fourth Grade Students

Colby Derr, Intern, Gray's Woods Elementary, 4th grade

Students in my classroom were calling out answers or questions throughout most lessons during the day. They were forgetting to raise their hand and just shouting out whatever came to their mind. By using a self-analysis tool and other non-verbal reminders, I hoped to decrease the number of times students called out during a lesson or discussion.
